Preventing Child Abuse in NC

Caregivers Don't Need To Do This Alone!

- Significant increase in the number of persons providing care to a friend or family member age 60 or older from 2000 to 2003
- Over 25% of adult North Carolinians now provide care to an older friend or relative
- Almost half of those receiving care are reported to have memory loss or dementia

Many people need the support of others who are in similar situations or perhaps the support of a professional. They may need education on caregiving issues. Caregivers may need respite or a "time-out" from their caregiving duties. Seeking information on what services are available and assistance to help connect with these services can be an important first step.
