The North Carolina Institute of Medicine

Since January 2002,
Publisher of The North Carolina Medical Journal

In 1983 the North Carolina General Assembly chartered the North Carolina Institute of Medicine as an independent, nonprofit organization to serve as a nonpolitical source of analysis and advice on issues of relevance to the health of North Carolina's population. The Institute is a convenor of persons and organizations with health-relevant expertise, a provider of carefully conducted studies of complex and often controversial health and healthcare issues, and a source of advice regarding available options for problem solution. The principal mode of addressing such issues is through the convening of task forces consisting of some of the state's leading professionals, policy makers and interest group representatives to undertake detailed analyses of the various dimensions of such issues and to identify a range of possible options for addressing them.

Members of the North Carolina Institute of Medicine are appointed for five-year terms by the Governor, and each task force convened by the Institute typically includes at least one-third of its membership from among the appointed members. Topics to be addressed through task force efforts are chosen following requests from the Governor, the General Assembly or agencies of state government. In some cases, topics are selected on the basis of requests from a number of stakeholder organizations across the state where this type of analytical process is considered to have potential value.

The North Carolina Institute of Medicine assumed the role of publisher of the North Carolina Medical Journal in January 2002 through an agreement with the North Carolina Medical Society, which founded the Journal in 1845. The Institute views the North Carolina Medical Journal as an extension of its mission. The Journal provides a forum for stakeholders, healthcare professionals, and policy makers and shapers to study and discuss the most salient health policy issues facing our state. Like many states, North Carolina is grappling with issues such as an increasing number of uninsured, the unmet health needs of the growing Latino population, a critical shortage of nursing personnel, the health risks of tobacco and obesity, rising prescription drugs costs, mental health system reform, the increasing societal burden of chronic illness care, the threat of bioterrorism and the necessity of assuring adequate public health preparedness—all in the midst of an economic downturn. Each of these issues presents unique challenges to healthcare providers and state policy makers. Yet, a fully implemented task force to consider each of these sets of issues is not feasible. The Journal makes it possible to present an organized and balanced overview of some of these issues, six times per year, and allows interested persons the opportunity to engage in the ongoing discussion of these issues throughout the year. The Institute hopes that our readers of the Journal will, in this way, become involved in the continuing debate about the most promising avenues for assuring the highest standards of health and healthcare for all North Carolinians.
